*Bad breath of gum disease is caused by the accumulation of food, and bacteria on and between your teeth and under your gums. As the infection worsens, decomposing blood, pus and food can emit a very bad smell, as you can imagine! Bad breath may also be caused by items you put in your mouth, as well as some health conditions. **Gum disease is often painless, until advanced stages. Then, before you know it, you are having a life threatening infection, and swollen face. You could loose teeth unnecessarily!
